GUARANTEED DEPARTURES!

Type that slips in the night. CURRENTS regrets two errors in listing winners of Excellence in Writing recognition awards (October 1980). Winner George L. Beezer, editor of Lehigh Horizons, was omitted. And Harvard Magazine, edited by John T. Bethell, appeared only as "Har." CURRENTS wrote Bethell in apology, "Could you manage to construe this as misguided humor? Har, har?" Bethell replied, "Just a '-vard' in the January issue will be fine."

Fees and facts. "Don't limit your choice of colleges because of money," advises the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts. It backs up its free advice with a free brochure on college financial aid, and sends 15,000 copies to the state's high school students. For a copy of the publication that lists sources, deadlines, eligibility requirements, and more, write to Beth Forbes, AICUM, 11 Beacon St., Suite 1224, Boston, MA 02108.

Camping out. Alumni at the University of Alaska look to nature as the backdrop for their unusual and inexpensive reunions. Every two years, alumni from western states gather in a California state park for three-day "encampments." Holed up in trailers, tents, and sleeping bags, the campers golf, raft, play horseshoe-toss, eat sourdough pancakes, and plan for their next encampment. Evy Walters, alumni director, UA Fairbanks, AK 99701, has more information.

To do just that, the College of William and Mary created a Public Affairs Communication Team (PACT) of volunteers. Each volunteer is matched with a member of the General Assembly and helps to keep that person informed of the college's concerns. ## A Fund Raising Success Story

Our work on major development projects has been widely noted. Particularly the phone/mail program we devised for one of the world's great universities.

Naturally, we are proud that our idea played a significant role in the largest campaign in the history of educational fund-raising.

But it is also satisfying to serve smaller institutions in the fields of education, religion and health care. Their needs are great. And so are the opportunities.

We can work with large and small alike because our service is built on flexibility. We give each client only what he wants. And all that he wants. It works. Clients like it. That's our success story.

Can we be helpful to you? Explore the possibilities. For further information, please call or write our president, William Freyd.

A will and a way. Explaining the intricacies of estate planning to ordinary folks isn't easy. It takes good organization of material and simple, clear writing. The University of Tennessee deserves an "A" for "Selected Estate Planning Ideas and Information," prepared for use in UT's estate planning short courses. For a copy, write to Michael F. Hitchcox, Director of Estate Planning and Deferred Gifts, UT, 600 Andy Holt Tower, Knoxville, TN 37916.

Declaration of independents. To achieve a collective voice in state policies, independent colleges in 42 states have joined forces to form state associations, reports Morgan Odell, executive director, Association of Independent California Colleges and Universities. The associations research issues affecting their members, monitor proposals, lobby legislatures, and give advice to members. The goal: a favorable climate for each institution to pursue its special mission.
